ABOUT US

As children, their paths crossed, but never directly. A glance here, a look there, but never anything more than that. Even though their mothers knew each other and his sister was her Confirmation sponsor, never more than a hello was exchanged between them at _____^{Location}_____^{Location}_____ of Angels Grammar School.

Over twenty years later, by chance on Facebook, John noticed that Allison had commented on an old _____^{Noun}_____ page. Smitten with her pretty face, he decided to add her and send her a message. For a while, they wrote back and forth, neither wanting to get too excited, but that was hard.

A few weeks pass and John does not hear from her, so he assumes that she has forgotten about him. Finally, after being away, she gets back in touch with him. They decide to exchange email addresses and cell phone numbers. Now, it is Allison who worries, as John leaves for a week, without notice.

he returns, they decide to meet up. After their _____^{Number} attempt failed, they decide to rendezvous at Dave and _____^{Noun}. In case they did not connect, they could play games. Five hours later, they are basically thrown out of the place, because it is closing. They have yet to play a game there.

_____^{Adjective} it takes John three months to finally get the courage to ask her out. Of all places, at a bus stop. His thinking, if she said no, then he can just jump on the bus. There was never any doubt in either _____^{Noun} mind that they finally found love. She had found her prince and he had found his princess. On April 22nd, John asked Allison to marry him outside their old school, the place where it all began.
