Once upon a time there was alady named Gertrude. She spent at leasthours everyday fantasizing about theof her dreams. Following the advice of her Gertrude had decided to wait until she wasto lose her Now pushing years-old, she wondered if she would die a virgin. As she stopped atfor her morning cup of she noticed a new barista behind the counter. "What can I get for you?"; the young man inquired. "You obviously don't need to order anytoday; you already have enough of that."; It was the mostthing anyone had ever said to Gertrude. Before she knew what she was doing, sheto one knee and proposed marriage to thisstranger. He immediately accepted, and they bothoff into the sunset, ain each of their hands.
