A word of encouragement...

April 20, 2012

Dear
As you prepare for your upcoming final exams and end-of-the-year papers and projects, I thought you might lik to hear an story about when I was in college, all those years ago.
The year was, yes the Dark Ages, and we did not have nearly the distractions available to us that you have today. No iPods, cell phones, or Facebook. We had to resort to playing our records when we wanted to delay our studying. We would put those color adjective disks on our stereo and play the music The entire dorm would start verb - Present ends in ING and Verb - Present ends in ING throughout the hall. Our social media consisted of writing Adjective messages on each others dry erase memo boards, which hung on all of our dorm doors. Once we settled down, we would fortify ourselves with beverage and Adjective food . Those less studious people among us would choose and and, and maybe even smoke some flammable material Since we didnt have computers, we would have to to the library, which as you know, was uphill all the way, both directions. There we used a card catalogue to look up journals and books about the historical event and the War of Noun - Plural. Once we had taken notes, using only a uncommon writing instrument and paper, wed trudge back to our dorms and begin typing on our typewriter, using

only our body part	We did not have spell-check, so we had to resort to using a dictionary.
Our pare	ents rarely bothered us because they were worried about their long distance phone bills
They could really only nag	g us by sending us a letter that arrived by mail every few, rather, rather, rather, than by sending us	text messages. Arent you lucky that I only text you to tell you about name of celebrity you like	_!
Anyway, I know that you a	are a very smart and young person, and you will absolutely do superlative adverb On	these upcoming exams and projects. Study hard! I love you.
Your name Mom or Dad
