The Witche's Daughter

Once upon a time, there was a lonely young maiden. She had lovely _____^{Adjective} _____^{Color} hair that came down to her _____^{Body part} and bright _____^{Color} eyes, and many men would love to marry her. But she kept herself hidden from the world in her small stone cottage on the banks of a small _____^{Noun} in the middle of the forest, with all the curtains drawn and doors locked. She rarely came of the small stone cottage, and when she did she hid her beautiful face behind a long black veil, so she would not be seen.

One _____^{Time} _____^{Season} morning, the maiden was feeling particularly _____^{Emotion} and she ventured outside without her veil. As she played in the stream, she spotted a young man lingering at the edge of the _____^{Noun} watching her. "Don't look! If you do, you shall _____^{Verb}"; she cried as she flung her arms in front of her face. The young man came closer to the girl, and took her hands away from her face. "Young lady, what is there to hide? You have such a _____^{Adjective} face, but you won't let it show. Why is that?"; he said. The girl responded with a sigh. She said he does not understand what he has done. He has seen the face of the witch's daughter. "I'm so sorry, but my mother has lain a curse upon me, and any man who should gaze upon me will die a painful death. I'm so _____^{Emotion}. I truly am", she said as he crumpled to the ground, wrought with waves of pain. Soon he lay still, with no pulse. "I am sorry".
