Anthropomorphic?

There was once a young _____, Clyde, who was very _____. He never realized why all the other animals were so _____ and _____ with each other. He never understood how the _____ were constantly _____ with the _____, or the _____ with the _____. Clyde knew something was going to have to change, or else he was going to be lonely once he grew up. His dream of becoming a world known _____ was in jeopardy. All of a sudden the _____ that he was _____ under began to talk to him. It said, "Just _____ as loud as you can! It will give you _____ and show your _____." Clyde thought this was a _____ way to get attention, so he refused. Finally the tree pulled in its leaves, and the shade that he was under now was gone. He knew he would be _____ in the sun, so he needed those leaves back. Clyde gave out a _____ peep, and none of the other animals moved. He became very depressed, and didn't want to try again. Then his _____ came up to offer guidance. He told her the _____ that he was in, and she came up with a _____ idea. The young child got enough courage and gave out another growl. All the other animals turned around to see who it was, and Clyde felt honored and powerful. The other children welcomed him to play _____ and he heard all the new _____. Let's just hope they don't ask him for another growl, since it was his mother that helped him out.
