Rascal- alex miller

Sometimes letting go is the hardest part of a friendship. If you put your preference out of the way

_____ Conjunction _____ let your friend live their own life then you know you are a true friend. _____ Noun _____ decided _____ Pronoun _____ would have a _____ Adjective _____ life with his new mate and leave Sterling behind but he will never forget him. I think _____ Adverb _____ Rascal _____ Adverb _____ his head toward Sterling to thank him for all he has done before he left. Sterling made a great decision to let Rascal choose because he knows animals belong in the wilderness. Sterling also made the right choice because it showed Rascal how much he cares about him. My _____ Verb - Base Form _____ to it at first was I wanted Rascal to come back to Sterling and stay with him forever. Soon

I realized no animal deserves to sit _____ Preposition _____ a cage all day, and no animal deserves to have the dangers of humans around him. Sterling put Rascal in front of himself by not keeping his beloved friend but by letting Rascal live his life. Sterling knows Rascal will never forget all he has done to raise him into a great raccoon.

Sterling and Rascal might not see each other but they will remain great friends forever no matter what.
