I Have Lived a Thousand Years pg 49-70 SZ

Pain is a terrible thing. Whether it comes from a paper cut, having your feelings hurt, or being taken away from your home, it's truly dreadful. Elli has endured a lot of _____ Gerund throughout her 13th year as a Jewish girl. Her _____ Adjective Schwinn was taken away from her before she even had a chance to ride it. She and _____ Possessive Pronoun family were robbed of their home and sent to a cramped, crowded, and awful ghetto that was filled with people like a pitcher of water filled to the brim wanting to escape. Their precious belongings were unfairly seized by ravenous Hungarian soldiers, _____ Conjunction every one of those belongings of _____ Noun - Plural or pictures each have their own magical story behind them. They're memories that shouldn't be stolen from people's hearts and should live _____ Preposition forever, _____ Conjunction _____ Adverb they cannot because if there is nothing there to hold onto the memories, they can be lost forever. No one wants a piece of their past taken away from them. Even worse is a family member taken away from you. Hundreds of Jewish families were forced to let their fathers/husbands go. They would work throughout dawn and dusk with little nourishment or happiness in their lives, and because her mother didn't care to wake her up, Elli didn't even have the chance to _____ Verb - Base Form goodbye to her father for what I suspect the last time she would see him. I could never imagine the pain in Elli's heart. _____ Interjection! She even said no one would know what it felt like unless they were actually there.
