Wedding Blues

Julie was so _____ as she put on her _____ that day. She had her something _____, her something _____, her something _____, but oh wait, she had forgotten something blue! What was a bride-to-be to do? In her _____ dress, she _____ around the chapel, looking for a _____, a _____, even a _____, perhaps!

Alas, there was nothing. Her _____ was wet with sweat, her _____ red from running, and still she had no something blue. She sighed, with disbelief, that she had forgotten such an important monument to marriage. Her favorite _____ started to play, and she knew, with or without her blue, it was time for her to _____ down then aisle. As the doors of the chapel opened, she caught her first glimpse of her prince standing at the end of aisle. He was _____ and _____, draped in a stunning _____ . She looked into his eyes. He stared straight back at her. He looked sure, stable, and ready.

Just a few _____ later she was standing _____ to him. Every worry faded away and she was immersed in the moment. She felt so _____ she could almost _____ .

Soon enough they were exchanging _____, and she heard those famous words, "You may _____ the bride." _____ they looked into each other's _____. he smiled at her, and she smiled back up at him. Their faces slowly grew closer and just as their _____ were about to touch, Julian shouted, " _____!" Julie was shocked and frightened. Julian reached behind his _____, and almost as if from nowhere, he pulls out an _____, _____, but very blue, Los Angeles Dodgers hat. He placed it gently atop her head, and smiled. "Now you have your something blue." They kissed.
