destruction

the           Noun - Plural           were quiet after the           Noun           fell. Dust coated the entire area in a powder of           Noun - Plural          . Walking through the debris I wondered if help was coming to save           Proper Noun           from further attack. Cries rose behind me as my team moved slowly out of the           Noun          . The remains of           Noun           crunched beneath my boots as I abruptly stopped in front of what used to be the           Noun          . Tears rolled down my cheeks at the realization I would never smell the           Noun - Plural           baking again.
