How Casi and I Met

I was quite hesitant to go on this _____ Adjective date, especially considering the whole idea that I knew nothing other than her first _____ Noun. Blind dates can be _____ Adjective. Lucky for me, this date was at a location I was very familiar with - _____ Proper Noun City. If the date when terribly wrong, I could always just stroll across the dining room over to the _____ Noun area where my Thursday guys night crew was _____ Verb - Present Tense out. I had told them I had a "business _____ Noun" to not raise suspicion on why I was unable to _____ Verb this week. I arrived _____ Adjective and patiently waited in the waiting area near the host stand for a girl to come _____ Verb - Present Tense through the door looking for her lucky star. As Casi walked in, I immediately thought to myself: "Pretend you're waiting on someone else!" or if really desperate: "Run!". Kidding, I actually decided to ask if she was the aforementioned "Casi", as I was quite _____ Adjective at first glance. We went on to have a _____ Adjective evening full of interview questions and discussion. Unlike Casi, everything I found out that night was new to me, as I didn't go to master-stalking extremes. I assumed the date went well as it lasted far longer than expected and the _____ Noun seemed to flow very naturally. Nonetheless, I was still anxious as I very _____ Adverb attempted to ask Casi for her _____ Noun number after the date, which she gave me - score!
