Berenstain Bears' New Baby

The Berenstain Noun lived down a sunny dirt road, over a log bridge, up a Adjective hill, deep in Bear Country. Papa Bear, Mama Bear, and Small Bear all lived together in a Adjective tree house that Papa Bear hollowed out. Small Bear loved living in his tree house in Bear Country because there were always all sorts of Adjective things for him to do and see. His favorite part of the tree house was his room, where he had his small Noun that Papa Bear had made for him when he was a baby. But one morning, Small Bear woke up not feeling so good. His knees and legs ached because he had outgrown his Noun. Papa Bear and Small Bear set out the next morning to make him a new one out of a Noun from the woods. Mama Bear was relieved that he outgrew his bed just in time. When Papa Bear and Small Bear returned with the new wooden Noun they made from the tree they come home to a surprise. Small Bear's old Noun had been taken out of his room and given to a new baby sister! Small Bear was so excited to meet his new sister and was more than happy to see her enjoy sleeping in his old Noun that he grew up with as a baby.
