claires mad lib

There once was a Adjective girl named Rasfusha and she liked Conjunction Adjective Adjective boy named Tim. She always wrote notes to him and always texted him. Every day in math class she would talk Preposition me about him and she would say how Verb - Base Form she liked him. If you looked in her Noun you would see that it had pages full of Noun around Tim's name. Rasfusha would always tell me how Tim looked good in the color green. Pronoun thought that they are perfect for each other interjection. The only problem is that Tim does not like Rasfusha the way she liked him. People would tell Rasfusha that Tim didn't like her Conjunction she Verb - Base Form listen to them. Adverb Rasfusha asked Tim out on a date but Tim said no that he would never date her.
That made Rasfusha sad Adverb she still liked him even though he didn't like her. Preposition you ask Rasfusha if she still likes Tim she says no, I love him interjection <3. Finally after 20 years of Rasfusha liking Tim he said Pronoun would go Preposition a date with her. But the sad thing is the day before their date Tim got hit by a bus and died.

The End.
