

The Dean

1. Architect
2. The
3. Dean
4. Frog
5. Ate
6. Police Offiser

The Dean

There's a story about an architect known as "The Dean" of American Furniture Designers that one day found an 8 inch frog. He later ate a design for a family monument and gave it to a police officer. 10 years past and "The Dean" died. Now the Monument is at Oak Hill Cemetery in Grand Rapids Michigan. On the cemetery is a massive hunk of limestone and on the stone there is celtic markings carved into it and images that are relevant with the life of David Wolcott Kendall. Oak Hill Cemetery has many grave markers, monuments and mausoleums that go back to around 175 years of history and you can see the architecture from the past and from today in the Grand Valley. Kendall College of Art and Design was later named after David Wolcott Kendall.