

snow day

1. Adjective _____
2. Adjective _____

snow day

The Storm

One _____ Adjective and _____ Adjective day at Nooksack Valley High School, students began coming into the building for another day of learning. There were reports of snow on the news and radio stations, but there were no signs of snow. Classes began as usual, and the students were very distracted by the possibility of a storm. Their eyes were constantly glancing out the window, hoping that a snow day would actually happen.

As the school day continued, the weather started to change. Before the students could even get another glance out the window, the snow began to fall to the ground. Within an hour, the ground was covered with a thick layer of powder. The glimmer in their eyes began to shine, as the thought of an "early release" or "snow day" entered their minds. Immediately, the intercom interrupted the classes, and Mr. Galley spoke these words, "The busses will be here momentarily for an early release. We need to get the students home immediately for safety, as this is the beginning of possibly the worst snow storm that has ever been projected for Whatcom County. Please be safe, and tune-in to your radio or televisions for school closures. Thank you." They all jumped with joy! The students thought that this storm would never happen to them!