So here I am _____ Verb - Present ends in ING this Christmas _____ Noun for you, hoping you will love it! A couple days later, to the boys surprise, the young girl _____ Verb - Past Tense him via Facebook and said to go to her friends house on Wednesday, December 30th. Throughout the first movie the boy kept Verb - Present ends in ING to kiss the girl, and she would give him hope, then take it right back. The boy was becoming less and less optimistic as the girl continued to pull away from him, but just as he was about to give up, BAM! it happened! A kiss that let them know they were Noun - Plural. They Verb - Past Tense for the rest of the night, and the girl started to worry that this was just a fling and nothing more. As the girl continued with these thoughts the boy popped the question, not that question, but still just a good. "Will you go out with me?" he said, and the girl Verb - Past Tense on top of him with a kiss. The boy was confused and asked if that was a yes and the girl nodded her head. A few years later they welcomed a baby boy into the world who they loved with all their heart, and their little family lived happily ever after.

So I know this was pretty lame, but the idea just hit me so I went with it. I love you so much Tom! Merry
