Both of the Adjective girls want to win so badly that they arn't friends anymore in the middle of the story. The girls both think of the same thing to draw, their neighbor's cat Proper Noun. When the day of the contest arrived the girls were both sorry for ever leaving the other one and they felt so bad that they went out for Noun before the contest and left their drawings. Then two people came up and switched the paintings. It was the parents of the two girls because they didn't want their girls to leave. Then the girls unveiled the finished pictures and realized both the pictures were the same! The judges Verb - Past Tense the paintings and let both of the girls have the scholarship.
