A hostage crisis

This is the story of when _____^{Name} was taken hostage by a _____^{Adjective} terrorist group called the _____^{Any Word}.

It seemed like a _____^{Adjective} day. Jessica was in Iraq on a business trip, when all of the sudden a _____^{Adjective} man approached her and said, "Why hello there, _____^{Adjective} _____^{Noun}. What are you doing here all by yourself?" Jessica explained she was only in the country so she could _____^{Verb - Base} _____^{Form} a _____^{Noun}, but the man didn't believe him/her.

"You're a _____^{Noun}, aren't you?" The _____^{Adverb} _____^{Adjective} man inquired. " _____^{Exclamation}!" You must be _____^{Adjective}!" Jessica replied. At that time, a group of _____^{Noun - Plural} surrounded Jessica and threw her in the back of a van. "You won't get away with this!" Jessica exclaimed.

Jessica was taken to a dark room, filled with other _____^{Adjective} _____^{Noun - Plural} just like him/her. One of them looked at him/her straight in the _____^{Body Part} and said, " _____^{Exclamation}!" This caused Jessica to squirm as she became even more _____^{Adjective} than ever. She saw firsthand just how _____^{Adjective} terrorists were. Luckily, he/she still had his/her _____^{Adjective} phone, so she called the American _____^{Noun}. The consulate acted quickly and saved Jessica along with all the other hostages.

After

the ordeal, Jessica was transported back to America, where she said, "Thank goodness I'm back home! I hope I never have to be in a room full of _____ Noun - Plural ever again!"
