The... Adventure.

There was a Nonn named Brownie. She decided to go and Verb a very Adjective hole. But the Adjective question was where on Proper Nonn would she dig a hole? She had no idea. So she went to find somebody and ask. She found another Nonn, Maisy, and asked her where the perfect spot to dig a Nonn was. Maisy thought the best spot was a graveyard. Brownie wasn't sure if she wanted to go to a Nonn graveyard and dig a hole there. Nope, she wouldn't. So Brownie went to find another dog and ask THEM instead. She soon found Tucker, a German Shepard. She asked him where the best Nonn to dig a hole was and he said his backyard was the best spot, so she Verb-Past Tense Tucker as he lead her to his Nonn. He was right, his backyard was perfectly flat with no Nond-Paral or anything, and it was completely Adjective of Nonn so Brownie and Tucker dug a hole there and they were Adjective with it when it was Verb-Past Particide.
