THE BAMBOO-CUTTER'S DAUGHTER

An old bamboo-cutter was going home through the shades of evening. Far away among the stalks of the _____ Adjective bamboo he saw a soft _____ Noun. He went nearer to see what it was, and found it came from within one of the stalks.

He opened the bamboo stalk carefully, and found a tiny baby _____ Noun. She was only a few inches tall, but as beautiful as a _____ Noun. Indeed he wondered if she were not really a _____ Noun.

He carried her home and told his wife how he had found her. They were very glad for they had no _____ Noun, so they loved her as their own. In a few years she had grown to be a young _____ Noun. She was as _____ Adjective and _____ Adjective as she was beautiful. A soft light always seemed to follow her.

When the time came to name her they called her The _____ Noun _____ Noun, because she was found among the bamboo, and because she was more _____ Adjective than any princess.

People heard of how beautiful she was, and many peeped through the _____ Noun at the edge of the garden in hopes of _____ Verb - Present ends in ING her. All who saw her thought she was so _____ Adjective that they came back for another glimpse.

Among

those who came often to the hedge were five princes. Each one thought The Bamboo Princess the most beautiful woman he had ever seen, and each wished her for his _____ Noun _____.

So each of the five wrote to the father of the princess asking to marry her. It so happened that all five letters were brought to the old man at the same time.

The old man did not know which one to choose, nor what to do. He was afraid, too, that if he chose one of the princes, the other four would be angry. But the princess had a plan. "Have them all come here," she said, "then we can choose better."

On a certain day the five princes came to the _____ Noun _____ of the bamboo-cutter. They were very glad to have another chance to see her, and each one thought he would be the one she would marry. The princess did not wish to marry any of them. She wanted stay with her dear father and mother. She wished to take care of them as long as they lived. So she gave each one something to do which was impossible.

The first she asked to go to _____ Location _____ and find the great stone _____ Noun _____ of _____ First Name of a Person _____ . The second one was to bring her a _____ Noun _____ from the jeweled trees that grew on the floating mountain of Horai.

The

third prince asked what he might do to show his love. The princess said that he might bring her a _____ made from the skins of the fire _____.

She asked the fourth to bring a _____ from the neck of the sea dragon, and the fifth prince offered to bring her the _____ which the swallows keep hidden in their nests.

The princes hurried away, each anxious to be the first to return, and so marry the beautiful Bamboo Princess.
