

Ancient Greece Drama

1. Adjective
2. Adjective
3. Part Of Body
4. Adjective
5. Verb - Present Ends In S
6. Adjective
7. Adjective
8. First Name Of A Person
9. Animal

Ancient Greece Drama

Ancient Greece began in Ancient Greece around C.600-C.200 B.C. There were many Adjective Gods.

One of them was Dionysus. He was the God of wine and drama. HE provided plays to all Adjective men.

The men wore Part of Body mask's to cover up their Adjective faces. All men involved in plays had to play the roles of Verb - Present ends in S women. They acted three types of drama comedy, tragedy and Satyr. Comedies were down right Adjective. They had everybody on their feet and clutching their stomachs. Tragedies were based on old legends. They also developed off of love, loss, pain, and abuse of power.

Satyr were Adjective. They were short plays and were performed between acts of tragedies and made fun of characters. Without ancient Greece creation of drama there would be no First Name of a Person shows, or Animal actors, or any type of entertainment.