The Climate and Water Currents World Exploration Ch. 2

Chapter 2 Summary:

Zebra, Gorillas, Elephants and deserts ______vehicle type_____. They _______sped or zoomed______ away from the dangerous lions. The zebra brayed a, "Thanks for the rescue!" Then leapt off the ______same vehicle type _____.

nume 1 and nume 2 decided they'd like to see gorilla's in their natural habitat so they hopped in their same vehicle type and headed north to the tropical wet rainforest in central Africa. Once there, they sold their same vehicle type and made their way through the jungle on foot. Thunder roared. Lightning flashed. But neither Frank nor Alice shivered, it was a word to describe hot hot. No wonder it rained so much here! The hot sun evaporated water from the Atlantic Ocean, filling the area with moisture. When the clouds became too full (which was often) the rain would come tumbling or plumiting down out of the sky. It was bizarre to think that gorillas needed such a thick covering of fur in such a humid environment, but perhaps it helps camouflage them in the dark jungle.

the storm passed over, _______ spied a family of gorillas. The gorillas were sitting on the ground munching on leaves. _______ and Alice watched them for a while, but when it started to rain again, they decided it was time to go. They _______ past tense synonym for walked ______ out of the jungle.

As they headed north the number of trees decreased or diminished. Instead of the lush green forest, they were now traveling through a grassy savanna. This was a semiarid region so the air was hot and dry. They saw a family of elephants synonym for walk by, but they saw no giraffes, no zebras. When they stopped in town to have a lunch of food item and food item they overheard a fellow customer talking about how there used to be lions in the area, but now their numbers had dwindled to almost nil.

name 1 and name 2 would soon be crossing the Sahara desert, and had no desire to do so on foot so they rented a vehicle type. The drive across the desert was unpleasant. They eventually made it to Africa's western coast, where they hopped on a boat.
