Romance is So Hard

Once upon a time, in Frederick Maryland, there was a fellow who was in love with an unknown fair maiden.

          Pronoun           thought that she was the most beautiful person in the world. The           Adverb           simple Noun           tried everything to           Adverb           impress           Pronoun          . He sang to her, danced for her, and even tried serenading her with a sousaphone and a saxophone. The           Noun           did not prefer any of these things. Her           Verb - Present Tense           broke through the skull of the hard headed man and he           Adverb broke. He baked delicious foods for her that smelled           Adjective           and she still complained.           Adverb a few tries, he figured out what he had to do. One day, he decided to do the most extravagant thing yet. It would be so           Adjective           that she would have to be his! The           Noun           bought the           Adjective           maiden two           Adjective           brown and           Adjective           puppies,           Verb - Past Tense           loud fireworks in the air, and screamed to her with a megaphone, "Will you           Verb           mine?" The fair maiden screamed back "Yes!
          Pronoun           will be yours forever and ever!" The proud           Noun           realized something after this.
          Pronoun           didn't know her name. "What is your name?"           Pronoun           inquired. After this the fair maiden replied, "Carson" The fellow was shocked. He           Verb - Past Tense           on a boat and sailed away to another           Noun          , leaving the fair maiden behind. This was           Adverb           because Akshey realized that his fair maiden was a man. The splish splash of him leaving was evident to Carson and he became Verb - Past Participle          .
