China and Obama

PRESIDENT XI: (As interpreted.) In the first _____<sup>Noun</sup> that I've had with President Obama this afternoon, we had an in-depth, sincere and candid _____<sup>Noun</sup> on the domestic and foreign policies of China and the United States, on our joint work to build a new model of major country _____<sup>Noun</sup>, and our international and regional issues of mutual interest. And the President and I reached important _____<sup>Noun</sup> on these issues.

I stated very clearly to President Obama that China will be firmly committed to the path of peaceful _____<sup>Noun</sup> and China will be firm in deepening reform and opening up the country wider to the _____<sup>Noun</sup>. China will work hard to realize the Chinese dream of the great national _____<sup>Noun</sup> and will work hard to push forward the noble cause of peace and development for all _____<sup>Noun</sup>.

By the Chinese dream, we seek to have economic prosperity, national renewal and people's well-being. The Chinese dream is about cooperation, _____<sup>Noun</sup>, peace and win-win, and it is connected to the American Dream and the beautiful dreams people in other _____<sup>Noun - Plural</sup> may have.

President Obama and I both believe that in the age of economic _____<sup>Noun</sup> and facing the objective need of countries sticking together in the face of difficulties, China and the United States must find a new path -- one that is different from the inevitable confrontation and conflict between the major _____<sup>Noun - Plural</sup> of the past. And that is to say the two sides must work together to build a new model of major country relationship based on mutual respect and win-win cooperation for the benefit of the Chinese and American _____ Noun - Plural _____, and people elsewhere in the world.

The international community _____ Noun _____ to China and the United States to deliver this. When China and the United States work together, we can be an anchor for world stability and the propeller of world _____ Noun _____.

I stand ready to work with President Obama to expand on all levels of _____ Noun - Plural _____ between the two sides . I look forward to maintaining close communication with the President through mutual _____ Noun _____, bilateral meetings, exchange of letters and phone calls. And I invited President Obama to come to China at an appropriate time for a similar meeting like this. And we look forward to visiting each other _____ Noun _____.

At the same time, the two sides will work hard to make _____ Noun _____ in the various bilateral mechanisms, such as the strategic and economic dialogue and the high-level consultation on people-to-people exchange. Also, the Chinese Minister of Foreign Affairs and the Chinese Minister of National Defense will both make visits to the United States within the _____ Noun _____.
