In the Jungle

There once was a Proper Noun. The monkey's name is Micheal. He Verb - Past Tense in the big Noun with all the other animals. It was a Noun Noun to live but sometimes it got very scary. His best friends were Ellie the elephant, Ted the tiger, and Freddie the Noun. Everyday the four of them Verb - Past Tense the jungle. Ted and his friends were very troublesome. They constantly got lost and needed help from all the older animals. Especially the day when the Noun - Plural came to visit. They were Verb - Present Tense the jungle like a normal day. When they started hearing this Noun sound that kept getting louder. Then they saw the blinding lights of a jeep filled with humans. They all started Verb - Present Tense towards their Noun as fast as they could. Once they got to the area where they all lived they started shouting for help and all the Noun - Plural came over to see what the commotion was. When the jeep came to a halt in front of them all. They all Verb - Past Tense at the humans as the humans Verb - Past Tense at them. Everyone was thinking this was the end to their normal lives in the Noun. But it turned out the humans only wanted pictures of them in their "Adjective" habitats. After they got the pictures they left the Noun - Plural to live their lives in the jungle. Micheal the monkey, Ellie the elephant, Ted the tiger, and Freddie the frog had another day of exploring and Noun - Plural to look forward too.
