Robin Hood

Long ago, in _______ in Sherwood forest lived Robin Hood. As a boy Robin had been cheated by a few _______ and since then he had decided that he would not spare the rich. He would rob the _______ Adjective ______ and give to the _______.

new plan to verb him.

Finally, the Sheriff thought of a plan. "Let us have a competition to choose the best Noun in Nottingham. Robin Hood cannot resist such a competition. He will surely come, when he does, my guards will capture him," he told his noblemen. All of them agreed.

Now,

Robin Hood was an excellent ______; there was none better than him with a ______ and ______ in the whole of Nottingham. And Robin Hood could surely not resist taking part in any competition to prove that he was the best.

Robin Hood's loyal men dissuaded him. "Robin, this competition is being held to Noun you," said one of the men. "It would be foolish to Verb into the lion's den," said another. But Robin Hood was not willing to listen.

The competition began. William, the Sheriff's man, who had also participated and man in a Adjective outfit were vying for the first prize, a golden Noun, after ten rounds. It was time for the last arrow to be shot; the winner of this round would be declared the best Noun in Nottingham.

William took aim first and shot; it was very close to the center. The Sheriff applauded. "Good shot, William," he said. Then it was the turn of the man in green; he let go of his arrow. The crowd cheered _________. It went through William's arrow and bull's eye. And within a flash the man in green let go of two more arrows which came flying towards the chair on which the Sheriff sat and stuck on either side of it. The Sheriff was Verb - Past Participle

The man in green was none other than Robin Hood. Before the Sheriff recovered, he pulled off his

Adjective wig, threw it in the ground, Verb - Past Tense over a wall on to his waiting horse and was gone. "Get him, you fools. That is Robin Hood," shouted the helpless Sheriff, but it was too late. Robin Hood had Verb - Past Participle again.
