Tim and Robin's Wedding

Once upon a time, there was a           Noun           named           Proper Noun           and a           Noun           named           Proper Noun          . One day,           Proper Noun           came out for           Noun           with           Proper Noun           and his friends after           Noun          . She seemed           Adjective           towards           Proper Noun           and           Verb - Past Tense           him for most of the           Noun          . After           Verb - Present Tense           an           Noun           to play           Noun - Plural           with the           Noun           after           Noun          ,           Proper Noun                     Verb - Past Tense           and           Proper Noun           went home sad, assuming she thought he wasn't a           Noun           she           Verb - Past Tense           to be near. 3           Noun - Plural           later, the           Noun           happened again and this time,           Proper Noun           talked to           Proper Noun          . She told him and his           Noun - Plural           about an           Noun           in           Proper Noun           that she was going to and           Verb - Past Tense           them to come along. Steve was           Verb - Past Participle           in going, but his           Noun - Plural           weren't. After trying hard to           Verb           the           Noun - Plural          , he           Verb - Past Tense           up going by himself and           Verb - Present Tense           about           Adjective                     Noun - Plural           in           Proper Noun           with this girl. She was           Adjective           to his obvious interest in her, and as the weeks continued, he was           Adjective           to her obvious interest in him.

One day, he sat down and got up the courage to tell           Pronoun           that he           Verb - Past Tense           her.           Verb - Past Participle          , she responded that she           Verb - Past Tense           him too. A few           Verb - Past Tense           later, they           Verb - Past Tense           started           Verb - Past Tense           and just shy of 4 years after that, they're getting           Verb - Past Tense          .
