Having a pet elephant while getting a suspension email

| I was Verb - Present ends in ING On my Adjective , Adjective elephant until I heard a messa | ge |
|---|--------|
| from my dads phone. It said that it was from Mr. Proper Noun . It also said that they are sorry to tell th | em |
| that their son is suspended. Having tardies in one week and punching a kids tooth out and | -, the |
| elephant urinated on me, and then farted. "Proper Noun !" I shouted the elephants name. The room nor | N |
| smelt like I looked for the phone around the room. I eventually found it | |
| Preposition the Noun. The elephant started to eat my shoe, my shirt, and my bag. Then the | |
| elephant smacked my | |

body part, but I still had my dads phone in my grip. I continued to read the message. It said that I was threatening somebody to get run over by my golf car. To recap, he was supposed to go to juvenile, but we're just giving your son a suspension. But interjection where did your son get a golf car from? Conjunction is that golf car possessive noun?

Thank you for your cooperation. The message finished. Did the elephant just eat me?

Dang, pro noun poop.
