The Christmas Without Sarah

In 2013, no one could have ever the Holiday season without their Adjective second/favorite child.
"Who is going to nag me to get Noun for her?" the older daughter asked, sobbing in the corner whilst holding her drink .
The mother and father stared out the window at the Adverb Adjective snow wondering how warm and Adjective it must be in California this time of year.
The grandfather sat on the Noun Verb - Base Form the paper. Or maybe he was Verb - Base Form the paper, he might've been Verb - Base Form .
The future son-in-law, new to the fold, Verb - Base Form the movie selections in the home and noted that they must all be films that the second daughter had left behind.
The dog, so Adjective and Adjective , Verb - Base Form around the house, begging for scraps of food . food , food that Adjective dog wanted everything.

But

the day was young! A Adjective box from the United States Postal Service arrived at the house. Cliff Clavin delivered it after all, so it was absolutely magical.

Inside the box were Hannakah trinkets; they were 90% off at Target and thus only cost .75 cents for all three ______Adjective______ items. Trinkets and booze actually.

In California, the younger daughter holds a club card to a store called BevMo. They have cheap alcohol and give away free samples sometimes and even have something called a five cent wine sale. The daughter receives discounts on them all! She got that Disaronno for like..._____Adjective_____ cents.

The rest of the package contained Noun - Plural and Noun - Plural for the family; all of them not well-written, but nonetheless thoughtful.

The family Skyped with their daughter while it was incredibly early in California. She was watching Cheers, wasting time on Youtube and thinking about ________ and _______ (as she always does).

They then surprised the second daughter with wonderful news! All five of them would be traveling to California in the near future to visit and go to _______.

"It is destined to be a great time!" the grandfather said.

"Yes, a great, great time," the parents agreed.

And then with a wink of her eye and a sip of Disaronno, the second daughter said, "Merry Christmas to all, and to all a good...afternoon? What time is it in Pennsylvania?"

THE END!
