Victoria's 2013 Christmas Mad Lib

Every           Proper Noun           Victoria's           Verb - Present Tense           husband writes a           Adjective           letter to her. It expresses his           Noun           and           Noun           for her. It also recounts the           Noun - Plural           and           Noun - Plural           of the past 12 months. Victoria's husband is not a           Adjective           gift buyer and frequently           Verb - 3rd Person Singular Present           to impress her. The letter allows him to express his feelings and make up for this           Noun          . Sometimes when Victoria reads this letter she gets tears of           Noun           because she knows she is loved.

The year 2013 brought us many things:

3 kids in           Noun          

2 kids to           Noun          

a springtime of           Noun           and           Noun          

a summer of           Noun          , a new           Noun           rivalry & a little           Noun          

We travelled to many places:

our annual           Noun           to the North Carolina           Noun          

the Greenbrier for New Years

Wild           Noun - Plural           at Disney in the fall

A lovely           Noun           to St John

Not

bad for a Noun from Bexley!

Sometimes in these letters there is a promise for the future. Adjective behavior, Adjective vacations or Adjective presents. This year is no different.

Chris promises to be a Adjective dad and husband.

Maxine promises to be more Noun at school

Mitch vows to Noun less about doing Noun

Walter promises to wear Noun every Noun.

We are going on another trip in May to Noun! We need to plan it now so it doesn't escape us!

I Adverb you very much.
