The Hungry Bird and Little Worm

The hungry Noun was Verb - Present Tense along one day. She was trying to find a Noun.

She didn't want the usual Noun - Plural or berries. A Adjective Noun would have to do.

So, as the hungry Noun was trying to find her next meal, a Noun caught her eye. She spotted a large, wiggly, fuzzy Noun. Oh, those were the best kind of Noun - Plural! They were Adjective and kept her full for the entire Noun. The hungry Noun swooped down and caught the fuzzy Noun with her beak. She was about to Verb the little Noun whole when all of a sudden, the Noun shouted, "Hey! What do you think you are doing?" The Noun was surprised but she kept him in her Noun. The Noun wiggled and faced her Adverb.

"I was just off to a Adjective start on my day but you just had to go and ruin it." The hungry Noun didn't know what to do. She never had to Verb to a meal before eating it. She Verb - Past Tense, "Well, I apologize for ruining your day but I am very Adjective! Now, please, let me enjoy my meal." Just as she was about to gulp the fuzzy Noun down, he quickly said, "Wait! I never introduced myself. My name is Wilfred and it is a pleasure to meet you. What is your name, pretty Noun?" The Noun rolled her eyes and looked down at him. "My name is Billie and it is good to meet you, too. Now, come on, I am starving!" "Won't you hear me out, Billie? I know a place that has great Noun - Plural and Noun - Plural for you to munch on instead of little, old, Adjective me."

Billie spat him out and eyeballed him. "You're too Adjective to eat anyway. Where is this Adjective place that you speak of?" Wilfred Verb - Past Tense with all of his might through the forest

as Billie followed him. "You see, I was about to head there myself for the _____ Noun - Plural before you came along." Finally, after the long trek, Billie chirped, "Wow! This place is _____ Adjective." There were all kinds of _____ Noun - Plural and bugs everywhere! Wilfred looked around and said, "See? I told you so. There's no need to _____ Verb on me when you can have a _____ Noun instead!" As Wilfred offered Billie the _____ Noun, she _____ Verb - Past Tense with laughter as she and her new friend had a pleasant lunch date.
