The only other _____^{Noun} in the cabin was a combination _____^{Noun} and dining area. The cookstove was _____^{Verb - Past Participle} by natural gas from a well that was located down the hill and across the _____^{Noun}. The pressure from the well was so low that it barely produced enough gas to cook. Pa always said we were lucky to have the _____^{Noun} of running water in the house, even if it was only cold water coming through a one-inch pipe from a hand-dug well to the kitchen sink. We didn't even have a bathtub or _____^{Noun} in the house! The water pipeline habitually _____^{Verb - Past Participle} during the winter, and my brothers and I spent many mornings unfreezing the pipe with hot coals from the fire. When the pipe was frozen, we'd grab a shovelful of _____^{Noun - Plural} and place them on the ground under the pipe. When we finally heard gurgling and then water spitting out of the kitchen sink, we knew we could return to the fire to get warm again.
