The Hue of The Spectrum

_____ Number _____ Noun - Plural ago, I was walking home from _____ Noun, when suddenly, a _____ Adjective _____ Animal, filled to the brim with _____ Adjective _____ Verb - Past Tense crates, _____ Event into the sidewalk, right in front of my _____ Part of Body; as any _____ Adjective _____ Noun would do, I started screaming, " _____ Noun !" over and over again, while _____ Verb - Present _____ ends in ING around in circle with a _____ Adjective expression on my face. I finally came out of my hysterics a _____ Noun later, only to find that no one but me had noticed the _____ Event; mind you, this was a very crowded and busy street at all times, and everybody was _____ Verb - Present ends in ING past, as if nothing had happened. Either way, I ignored this strange fact (because I didn't exactly stop to _____ Verb - Base Form about it) and proceeded to walk towards the _____ Event. Curiosity got the best of me, and remembering the _____ Verb - Past Tense boxes, I stepped into the _____ Adjective - Ends in EST _____ Noun of the _____ Animal
. As it turns out, these boxes were filled with strange novelties- you know, those weird knickknacks that seems like a person would never buy that can only be found in the deepest pile of _____ Adjective merchandise at _____ Proper Noun Town.

The strangest of these souvenirs was a _____ Adjective prism, the kind that is used to turn a beam of light into a rainbow. The reason why it was strange, though, was because, instead of turning light into _____ Noun - Plural, it served the purpose of turning darkness in _____ Part of Body. This was all I remember of the story, because as soon as I picked the prism up, I _____ Verb - Past Tense out.
