The Mysterious man

The Unicorn is a beautiful and mysterious beast who always walks alone. He is rarely seen. But once- and only once- the Unicorn did come among other animals. And that one and only time he shared with them his _____ Adjective _____ and magical powers.

Far, far away there was a jungle, and under the shady trees there was a pool of fresh water. It was the animals' pool, where they all came to drink.

Now for months there had been no rain and the sun had shone, hot and fierce. The streams and rivers dried up. The grass turned yellow-brown. Even the wild plants curled up and died. But the animals' pool, under the shady trees, stayed full to the brim. It never _____ Verb - Base Form _____. And so the animals had enough water to drink.

Until, one day, a snake came crawling out of a cave. He moved fast across the dry grass, into the jungle and straight towards the animals' pool.

When he reached the water's edge, he slowly raised his head and swaying from side to side, stretched over the pool and poured out a flood of deadly poison. It floated across the surface like oil, covering the whole of the pool. Then the snake moved off, fast as he came, back to his cave. And why did the snake do this? Because he was wicked. Because he felt like it. And because he cared for no one but himself. That was why
