A sonnet Writing to Himself

Young should not write sonnets, if they dream
Some day to reach the bright bare Object of Rhymes with Dream:
To such, sweet thoughts and mighty feelings seem
As though, like foreign things, they rarely came.
as men when haply they have heard
Of some new songster, some gay-feathered bird,
That hath over seas strayed in hope to find
In our thin foliage here a place
Fain would they the the things in their mind,
And cage them into sonnets as they come.
; they should serve their wants most,
Till the ripe time of song, when young thoughts fail,
Then their sad, like old, noun plural that describes the previous noun simile, might be Merry as youth, and yet grey-haired and hale.
