choice in choosing and presenting the type of literature projects they want to do. Giving students choices socially was somewhat more limited this year than in years past because I had a great many behaviorally challenged students. I was very reluctant in giving them much choice in who they could work with and I always insisted they sit in their assigned seats. I did ________ relent near the end of the year and allow my homeroom students to sit in the seat of their choice and it worked out pretty well for the most part. I did not want to take this chance with my content area classes however, as we could not afford to be off task. Giving the students the rubric at the beginning of a project is a way that I provide both choice and control to my students. The students know exactly what they have to do to get the grade they want.
