Thumbelina

A woman wants a little _____<sup>Noun</sup>_____, and when she goes to a witch that's exactly what she gets. Thumbelina is borne of a kernel of barley-corn.

Thumbelina lives with the woman who wished for her, with tiny possessions befitting her size. She is pretty and sings beautifully. But one night an ugly old toad steals into the _____<sup>Noun</sup>_____ and sees in Thumbelina a bride for her even uglier son. (Who can only croak, though the mom can speak.) She _____<sup>Verb - Present ends in S</sup>_____

Thumbelina is held captive on a lily pad in a marsh until some fish - who understand her plight - sever the lily pad, allowing it to float away. Thumbelina's praises are sung by the birds she passes, and she's _____<sup>Verb -</sup>_____ _____<sup>Past Tense</sup>_____ by a butterfly as she sails downriver on her lily pad boat.

Until along comes a _____<sup>Noun</sup>_____, who also sees in Thumbelina a potential wife. That is, until the other _____<sup>Noun - Plural</sup>_____ convince him how ugly Thumbelina is.

Poor Thumbelina; rejected by a _____<sup>Noun</sup>_____, though she'd had no interest in becoming Mrs. _____<sup>Noun</sup>_____.

Her self-image suffering, Thumbelina fares it alone for a summer, but then the weather starts turning cold.

Facing

certain death, she find the _____ Noun _____ of an old field-mouse and _____ Verb - Present ends in S _____ for food.

The kind old field-mouse takes Thumbelina in, _____ Verb - Present ends in ING _____ her and keeping her warm in return for her company. Unfortunately, the field-mouse thinks highly of her blind old neighbor, a mole, and thinks Thumbelina the perfect match for him. Thumbelina finds herself facing again an _____ Adjective _____ marriage, but this time she doesn't want to disappoint the old field-mouse woman who has been so good to her.

Thumbelina helps back to life a _____ Noun _____ left for dead, and a year later he returns to save her from her pending nuptials. She flies on his back to a _____ Adjective _____ meadow, where she discovers that in each flower dwells a tiny person. Her people!

Naturally, there's an eligible prince who sees Thumbelina and falls for her beauty, and Thumbelina seems okay with him too - seeing as how he's neither toad, _____ Noun _____ nor mole. Thumbelina is renamed May Blossom, given a pair of _____ Verb - Present ends in ING _____ wings, and likely lives happily ever after.
