On July 4, 1996, four high-school seniors - Julie, her boyfriend Ray, Julie's Adjective friend Helen, and her boyfriend Barry - drive to an Adjective Location after drinking at a party. While driving home, Ray becomes distracted and accidentally Verb - Present ends in S a pedestrian, apparently killing him.

As they argue over what to do, another teenager, Max, stops nearby. Julie convinces him that everything is all right and he verb int off. Over Julie's protests, the group decides to dispose of the stranger's Noun. They take the man down to the docks to dispose of his body, but he revives and Verb - Present ends in S them before falling into the water and drowning.

One year later, Julie is home from college for the summer. She receives a letter containing a note that says, "I know what you Verb - Past Tense last summer." When she tells Barry and Helen about the note, Barry suspects Max. The trio go to the docks where Max works as a fisherman. Barry warns Max, then Verb - Present ends in S him with a hook. Julie discovers that Ray also works there, and he tries to reconcile with Julie. Later, Max is Verb - Past Tense by a figure in a rain slicker wielding a Noun.

Barry is at a gym when he discovers a note in his locker containing a picture of his Noun and the message, "I verb int." Going outside, Barry is almost run over by the rain slicker-wearing figure, who is driving his car.

Julie reveals that the name of the person they hit was David Egan. Thinking the killer might be a local relative,

Julie and Helen head out to the Egans' residence deep in the inland swamps. They find David's Adjective older sister Missy, who explains that David's Noun Verb - Past Tense their family. Missy tells them that someone called "Billy Blue" came by to pay respects after David died, claiming to be his friend.

Helen returns home that night and prepares for the Fourth of July parade the next morning. Max's killer sneaks into her house, cuts off her First Name of a Person in the night, puts her Noun in her bed and writes,

" Proper Noun ", in lipstick on her mirror.

As Julie goes to Helen's house she finds Max's Noun, wrapped in Barry's jacket, in her trunk. When she goes to show the others, the body is missing, causing Barry to think she hallucinated. Julie, Helen and Barry confront Ray about the recent events. Ray claims that whoever knows is after him too and that he received a similar letter.

As Helen and Barry participate in the Fourth of July parade, Barry keeps an eye out for the killer, but notices several people wearing the same kind of Adjective art of clothing. Chasing one, Barry leaves Helen on one of the parade floats. As it passes by a two-story building, she notices a shadowy figure in a black rainslicker wield a Noun threateningly.

revisits Missy to ask her more about David Egan and "Billy Blue". Missy tells Julie that David is _____ Adjective and shows her a _____ Adjective note he left. As the writing matches that of the note she received, Julie tries convincing Missy that it is not a suicide note but a threat; Missy orders her to leave. Julie further researches David Egan's death. A year before the accident, he and his girlfriend Susie were involved in a car crash not far from the scene of the foursome's accident. David survived, but Susie died. The research mentions Susie's father, Ben Willis. Julie realizes that they did not run over David Egan that night but Ben, who _____ Verb - Past Tense David and disposed of the body that night.

At the annual Croaker Pageant, Helen's reign as Croaker Queen is about to end. While watching from a balcony, Barry is _____ Verb - Past Tense. Helen rushes upstairs with a police officer, but they find no sign of the killer or Barry. The officer thinks Helen imagined it and offers to _____ Verb - Base Form her _____ Noun. When their road is blocked by a _____ Noun they have to drive down an alley, where they spot a stalled truck. The officer investigates and is killed by a dark _____ Noun with a hook. Helen escapes and rushes to her family's store, where her sister Elsa lets her in. The killer enters through a side door and slashes Elsa's _____ Part of Body. The killer pursues Helen, killing her steps away from the parade.

Julie goes to the docks to tell her theory, but he does not believe her. She notices the name of the boat he's working on: Billy Blue. Julie panics, believing Ray is the _____ Noun, and runs off. As Ray chases her, a fisherman _____ Verb - Present ends in S him and puts her on his boat for safety. She looks around the boat and finds a room that contains _____ Noun - Plural and articles about her, Helen, Barry and Ray and realizes she is on Ben Willis' boat. Ben sets the boat adrift and chases Julie.

Ray catches up to Ben's boat with a _____ Noun. He uses the ship's rigging to cause Ben to lose his hook-carrying arm as he plummets over the side. All that is found of Ben is the severed arm with the hook in the hand. When the police question Julie and Ray, they deny having any idea why Ben would have wanted to kill them.

A year later, Julie is getting ready to return to her hometown for another summer to see Ray. As she enters the showers, she notices that one of the steamy glass doors has the sentence "I still _____ verb int," written on it. As she looks around, a dark _____ Noun crashes through the door.
