Typical Day at Tufts

What a rough night! I woke up on the roof of Tufts Building, so it must have been quite a party. I checked my watch and saw it was still so early - 11AM! I went back to sleep for High Number more minutes.

Afterwards, I got up and headed to Dewick for a quick bowl of butternut College Food bisque before class.

Always delicious and fortifying. On the way out, I grabbed an issue of the Tufts Daily - I needed the crossword for Dr. Robertson's class. After all, I'm only taking Favorite Class for Social Choice to fill the World Civilizations requirement.

Halfway through class I remembered: Tonight is the night of the big Bubs concert! I couldn't wait to hear them do that classic Eighties Band song, "Body Part of the Animal." Everyone loves the solos, but I have a huge crush on the beatboxer, Person in the Room. His mouth percussion is mesmerizing.

After class I was on the way back to my room in Tufts Dorm, but I realized I lost my keys! I retraced my steps Adverb all over campus, and finally found them in the couch cushions at Brown & Verb Beginning with B. I should have known I'd find them there - I practically live on their coffee!

After all this activity, it was time for a nap (after all, I sat through 1 class and found my keys). College is Adjective, am I right?
