

About DelCor

1. Interjection
2. Adjective
3. Noun
4. Proper Noun
5. Proper Noun
6. Verb - Present Tense
7. Curse Word
8. Noun
9. Noun - Plural
10. Adjective
11. Movie Title
12. Verb - Base Form
13. Slang Word - Plural
14. Noun
15. Verb - Past Participle
16. Verb
17. Noun
18. Noun
19. Noun
20. Noun
21. Proper Noun
22. Noun - Plural
23. Noun

24. Color
25. Noun - Plural
26. Verb - Present Ends In Ing
27. Noun
28. Event
29. Adjective
30. Adjective
31. Noun
32. Noun
33. Proper Noun
34. Proper Noun
35. Noun
36. Noun
37. Verb - Present Ends In Ing
38. Proper Noun
39. Proper Noun

About DelCor

Lionel Richie said "Interjection" back in 1984, the year the first Apple Macintosh went on sale and we heard the Terminator say, "I'll be back." If you had a dose of a Adjective Noun, you called Ghostbusters, but if you needed a custom database application, you called Proper Noun Proper Noun, the business launched that year by DelCor's CEO and founder, Loretta Monterastelli DeLuca.

As her business grew, Loretta helped clients with system design, implementation, and network support. In 1987, perhaps while Verb - Present Tense at IBM's new PS/2 curse word with a 3-1/2" floppy disk Noun, Loretta changed the company's name to Business Information Technologies to better reflect its range of Noun - Plural.

In 1988, we relived all the Adjective moments of Dirty Dancing and movie title on our VCRs, and Pixar won its first of many Oscars. We innocently watched Rick Astley Verb - Base Form "never gonna give you up," not knowing the slang word - plural awaiting us. 1988 was also the year Dave Coriale, DelCor's President, joined Loretta's company and soon became a Noun.

During the late '80s, Loretta and Dave worked for the first time with associations and nonprofits. Like any great lyric, they got Verb - Past Participle and decided to Verb solely on that community. In addition to network systems and support, they started offering technology and management consulting on Noun management systems selection, technology strategic _____^{Noun}, _____^{Noun} strategies, and _____^{Noun} outsourcing

In 1993, the year Prince changed his name to an unpronounceable symbol and the first web browser _____^{Proper Noun} was released, we welcomed Brian Sheehan, DelCor's third partner and Vice President of our Network Systems & Support _____^{Noun - Plural}, to the company. Contrary to popular belief, Brian is not an

'80s hair _____^{Noun} fan. He's more of a _____^{color} and jazz guy, a smooth operator.

Our company name changed in 1999 to DelCor Technology _____^{Noun - Plural}, Inc. We did not celebrate by _____^{Verb - Present ends in ING} along with Britney Spears, the newest pop _____^{Noun} on the scene; instead we danced with Mary Jane. (Yes, fans, that is a Tom Petty reference.)

After easily surviving _____^{Event}, our business grew in the new century. In 2003, we saw the launch of

MySpace and LinkedIn (_____^{Adjective}), and Madonna kissing Britney and Christina during the MTV awards

(not so _____^{Adjective}). Meanwhile, the DelCor team was focused on organizing our first annual _____^{Noun}. In the coming years our staff would become more and more involved in both the association and greater DC communities.

As _____^{Noun} continued to change the world, we broadened our range of services to meet our clients' needs.

In

2005, we established the Network Operations _____^{Proper Noun}_____ and the next year we launched our IT _____^{Proper Noun}_____ Model, the backbone of DelCorian philosophy. We joined the _____^{Noun}_____ in 2007, opened our Data Center the next year, and added social _____^{Noun}_____ consulting to our areas of expertise in 2010.

Today, all three partners continue to be active consultants, and DelCor remains focused on the association and nonprofit community. We still get excited about new technology and new music. Except Dave, he'll be _____^{Verb - Present ends in ING}_____ with _____^{Proper Noun}_____ _____^{Proper Noun}_____ for all eternity.