sdfasdf

1.	Proper Noun
2.	Proper Noun
3	Δdverh

sdfasdf

Heath ate a hamburger. My mother is named "" "Betty Jean" to be precise. She was named after her mother, my grandmotheranother "Betty," although my grandmother's middle name was "Lou." My name is "," actually "William Heath Alan," so I'm not a "Betty," at least not legally-speaking.
But as the years go by, I find that my partner (a "Gary," also not a "Betty") refers to me with greater frequency as "Betty Jean" because, so the stereotype goes, the more we age, the more like our mothers we eventually become. Like my mother, I sometimes speak a little too loudly. I'm also prone to repeating myself in conversations. And, on short or long road trips, I have a nervous habit of scanning radio stations for pretty much the entire ride, something my mother religiously did back in the days when push-button radios were standard and disco was still vogue.

©2025 WordBlanks.com · All Rights Reserved.