

The dragon

1. Noun
-

The dragon

"Good boy, Teddy!" I said as he brought the ball back. Teddy loved to play catch

And his black tail wagged. It was a sunny day and Teddy was running across

My lawn. Suddenly, Teddy sprinted across my lawn and ran toward a bush.

There was a flashing green portal in the bush. Teddy barked and dove in the portal.

The last thing I saw was his wagging tail before he vanished in the portal.

I dove in the portal with teddy. There was a flash of black and white, then PLOP! I fell in a patch of mud. When I looked closely at the mud, I found some dog footprints. I followed the footprints and they led to a castle.

There was a shiny pink door to the castle. It was also locked, so there must be a key to the door. I couldn't find it, so I used my amazing strength to rip open the castle door. I walked a couple steps in the castle. The floor was made of marble and the walls were green. I thought I heard a bark but it must have been my imagination. There were about 10 doors in the castle. Only one door was locked. I checked out the rest of the doors that weren't locked. There was a cafe, a library, a throne, and a collection of toy dragons and princes, a bookstore with books about kings and Queens. I saw stairs that lead upstairs.

There was a bedroom with a bookshelf, and there also was a TV in the bedroom.

I was done checking out the bedroom and walked downstairs. I sprinted to the locked door. Suddenly, I heard a ROAR! I ran outside and saw a red fire-breathing

Dragon shooting flames. "Where did you hide teddy?" I demanded. "I'm not telling you!" boomed the dragon."

Lock him in the dungeon!" Two servants in shining silver armor came and took me away. They carried me through the hallway, past the doors. When they came to the last door, the one that was locked, a servant pulled a key out of his pocket. The servant twisted and turned the key into the lock. Finally, the door popped open. The two servants dragged me in the dungeon. The other servant took another key off a hook in the dungeon and unlocked a cage. A servant pushed me in the cage. The two servants opened the door and left. I looked next to me and gasped. TEDDY WAS RIGHT NEXT TO ME! We had to get out of this cage and FAST! Just then I had an idea ! Teddy could bite through the bars! "Teddy, could you bite through these bars? That would help!" Teddy barked . (I think that meant yes!) "Thanks, Teddy!" I said. It took a couple minutes for teddy to bite through the bars, but he finally did it. "Good job, Teddy!" We jumped down and sprinted to the door. The door was pretty far away. I tried to open the door, but it was locked. Then I remembered the key on the hook I took it and unlocked the door. I sprinted through the hallway.

I ran outside and saw another portal. This one was red. Me and Teddy jumped through the red portal. It flashed and buzzed. Then we both landed on our lawn back at home. Teddy ran off and barked. I chased after him before he got himself in another problem. "Good boy, Teddy!" I said as he brang the ball back. Teddy loved to play catch

And his black tail wagged. It was a sunny day and Teddy was running across

My lawn. Suddenly, Teddy sprinted across my lawn and ran toward a bush.

There was a flashing green portal in the bush. Teddy barked and dove in the portal.

The last thing I saw was his wagging tail before he vanished in the portal.

I dove in the portal with teddy. There was a flash of black and white, then PLOP! I fell in a patch of mud. When looked closely at the mud, I found some dog footprints. I followed the footprints and they led to a castle.

I

There was a shiny pink door to the castle. It was also locked, so there must be a key to the door. I couldn't find it, so I used my amazing strength to rip open the castle door. I walked a couple steps in the castle. The floor was made of marble and the walls were green. I thought I heard a bark but it must have been my imagination. There were about 10 doors in the castle. Only one door was locked. I checked out the rest of the doors that weren't locked. There was a cafe, a library, a throne, and a collection of toy dragons and princes, a bookstore with books about kings and Queens. I saw stairs that lead upstairs.

There was a bedroom with a bookshelf, and there also was a TV in the bedroom.

I was done checking out the bedroom and walked downstairs. I sprinted to the locked door. Suddenly, I heard a ROAR! I ran outside and saw a red fire-breathing

Dragon shooting flames. "Where did you hide teddy?" I demanded. "I'm not telling you!" boomed the dragon.

Lock him in the dungeon!" Two servants in shining silver armor came and took me away. They carried me through the hallway, past the doors. When they came to the last door, the one that was locked, a servant pulled a key out of his pocket. The servant twisted and turned the key into the lock. Finally, the door popped open. The two servants dragged me in the dungeon. The other servant took another key off a hook in the dungeon and unlocked a cage. A servant pushed me in the cage. The two servants opened the door and left. I looked next to me and gasped. TEDDY WAS RIGHT NEXT TO ME! We had to get out of this cage and FAST! Just then I had an idea! Teddy could bite through the bars! "Teddy, could you bite through these bars? That would help!" Teddy barked. (I think that meant yes!) "Thanks, Teddy!" I said. It took a couple minutes for teddy to bite through the bars, but he finally did it. "Good job, Teddy!" We jumped down and sprinted to the door. The door was pretty far away. I tried to open the door, but it was locked. Then I remembered the key on the hook I took it and unlocked the door. I sprinted through the hallway.

I ran outside and saw another portal. This one was red. Me and Teddy jumped through the red portal. It flashed and buzzed. Then we both landed on our lawn back at home. Teddy ran off and barked. I chased after him before he got himself in another Noun .