Dementia Mad Lib

Loved One: Where have you BEEN? I have viruses in my [Electronic], [Electronic actually get a virus in]!
Caretaker: No, you don't. Remember, we talked about this like [number, slightly exaggerated out of frustration] times? You changed a password somewhere. Are you ready to let me fix it?
LO: You NEVER listen to me, because you're a/n [uncalled for insult]! I'm sure I have the [madeup word] virus and you don't believe me!
C: You might be right- if you'll let me see your devices, I'll see what I can do.
LO: No, [curseword]! TELL ME HOW TO DO IT! I want to do it myself! You don't want me to know how to do it on my own!
C: (takes deep [verb ending in ing] breath) Okay, let's start with coming up with a memorable password and changing it on everything.

Forget it, you [insult]. You never want to help me.
