Dreams

I have a Adjective mind that doesn't allow me to handle my dreams. My dreams are always creative, and help me to get inspiration from them. Pronoun tend to find myself in a Adjective place, my mind is in scribbles. Proper Noun trying to learn how to Lucid dream, because I know it will help me remember my dreams. My mind watches the Adjective visions I have and I try to notice and dream until I wake up. I wish I knew how to Adverb Lucid dream. I Adverb I try to remember my dreams from the night before, but usually fail to do so. After Adjective attempts to try to Lucid dream, I thought I'd be near almost doing it. The gaps in my dreams cross over to my Adjective memories. Dreams falsely go to the back of my head, to a waste land. I figured that I can't Lucid dream because of this. Dreams make me Adjective. Does Noun else have this problem? Pronoun would like to think I am not the only one! Don't get as frustrated as I get while trying to control or handle Noun dreams. Staying Noun and keep trying to dream is what I plan to do.
