Sky Diving

Roland, Connor, and Risa were the best of friends from the small Noun of Richyville. One day the group decided to that they were going to go skydiving. Connor believed this would be a Noun act of stupidity, but Risa and Roland were overwhelmingly Verb about the trip and proceeded to Verb all over. The group then called a Noun skydiving teacher who explained the rules of skydiving to them from his tome of infinite knowledge of skydiving. The group was ready to go, but the teacher Adjective told the 3 that they needed a 4th. The group then turned to the Adjective of the town of Richyville named Dewey.

3..... 2..... 1..... Jump! The 4 of them leaped out of the plane one after another with the Adjective Dewey leading the way. The group was having so much fun on the way down that they wanted pictures, and Dewey, being the outcast, took the camera from Risa's backpack and started taking pictures of the Noun other 3 while they ere doing midair poses with each other. Just then Deweys parachute bag Past tense verb teeth and sucked him and the camera into itself. The group then realized that this whole trip had Been wasted, the camera was gone! When they landed they all went home and balled their eyes out. Deweys parachute laid on the ground and was easily forgotten because he was an outcast. The 3 never learned their lessons though because the next day they went rock climbing with the new town pariah.
