Justice Wargrave, a recently retired judge, is taking a _____ Noun to the seaside town of Sticklehaven, where he will get on a boat to Indian Island. He thinks about the rumors about the island: a mysterious Mr. Owen bought the island. People have suggested that a movie star or a member of the royal family really owns the island. Wargrave takes a letter from his pocket and looks at what it says. The letter asks him to come visit the island and is signed by an old friend of his, Constance Culmington, whom he has not seen for eight years. He thinks that Constance is exactly the kind of woman who would buy a place like Indian Island.
