My grandfather

It all started when I was young. My _____ Verb - Past Tense had this amazing collection of coins and bills from different _____ Verb - Past Tense. He didn't really let me touch them, unless it was something of no value, but he'd always let me sit around and watch him organize and clean them. He used to love talking about his collection with such passion, that I could see it even at my _____ Verb - Past Tense age. He always use to say; Fiona, if you want to learn about other cultures, these coins and bills will tell you everything you need to know. He loved history, and so did I.

When he passed, the only thing _____ Verb - Past Tense desired was his collection. There were many parties involved in the affairs, so _____ Verb - Past Tense was only given some of it. they decided to sell the rest. I was devastated, _____ Verb - Past Tense I felt that the collection belonged to me, I was the only one he really shared his passion with.

Years go by, and I move to the States. _____ Verb - Past Tense had brought with me my grandfather's collection, whatever was given to me anyways. My grandfather _____ Verb - Past Tense on me the love of collecting money, but I didn't start collecting until about 13 years ago. I was at a flea market, and saw someone selling old banknotes and coins, and it brought back memories on the spot. I decided to _____ Verb a couple, and add to whatever _____ Verb - Past Tense brought from Albania. That got me hooked. I've become a serious collector buying banknotes from many different countries, and at the same time exploring their history. Here's some of them and the history behind them.
