Attack of the Droolers

The group of people such as babies approached slow and steady like a wave of zombies. They wanted dinner. I couldn't run away because I was chained to the Noun. No matter how hard I tried the chains wouldn't budge.

When the first one reached me they shouted, "expression or lyrics!"

I wondered if I could talk them into Verb Present ends in ING me. "Hey, let me Verb Base Form!" said I. "I'm a real Noun!" I added, trying to make my face look funny. Maybe try distracting them, I thought.

More of them were Verb Present ends in ING at the place where I was trapped. They all began climbing up my pant legs. They felt Adjective. Soon my pants were dripping with drool and felt Adjective as they clung to my legs. I screamed. It was more than I could stand. I remembered, panic stricken, the time when Full Name of a Person had dropped the Noun pie on top of my head, Adjective goo running down me, my arms difficult to move with the sap seeping into every where. Presently, I fainted.

When I woke up they had gummed me into a Verb Present ends in ING mess but their drool had made the chains so slippery that I had just Verb Base Form out of them. I was free as a Animal. I sat up, laughing, and patted a particularly cute, Adjective one on the head.
