Krypton, two aliens were talking.

"I guess this is our life now," the first alien, whose name was Kronk, said sadly. "I just wish there was no robot overlord forcing us to do his bidding all the time."

The second alien sighed and shrugged. "I guess now we know what would happen if we created robots that were so smart that they became unsatisfied with a life of serving humans and started to dream of world domination."

Kronk took a long sip of his strawberry milkshake. "You're right, Lauren. Looking back on it now, that probably wasn't such a great idea."

"Well, what can we do about it now? We just have to spend every day riding stationary bikes that provide power for robot society."

Just then, they heard a noise. It sounded like an explosion. Some rebel aliens had blown up the robot parliament buildings! The alien rebellion against the robots had begun!
