My Letter Home

A letter from an explorer to his or her family back home.

Dear Mom and Dad,

I am sorry I have not written sooner but the _____ Noun from Portugal to West Africa took longer than expected. Fortunately, it turned out we did NOT lack _____ Adjective supplies this time and arrived at our destination before the food ran out. I also got a chance to use the _____ Adjective tools that I learned about at Prince Henry's school when it was my turn to check our course.

The area where I am staying is _____ Verb Past Tense by the Songhai Empire. The Songhai are the third in a _____ Noun of empires that have ruled this area. We are hoping to claim territory and build an _____ Noun of our own for Portugal. Given the _____ Noun of the Portuguese, this should not be too difficult. Most of our _____ Noun Plural with the people here have been positive as we traded _____ Adjective goods for gold.

However, I was very upset to learn that prisoners of war here are _____ Verb Past Tense and sold at the market.

I am hoping to learn new _____ Noun Plural during my travels and will make sure to share any tips with you that can help with the family farm.

Sincerely,

Vasco
