Gettysburg Address

Four _____^{Plural noun} and seven years ago our _____^{Plural noun} brought forth on this continent, a new nation, conceived in Liberty, and dedicated to the proposition that all men are _____^{Past tense verb} equal.

Now we are _____^{Past tense verb} in a great civil war, testing whether that _____^{Noun} or any _____^{noun} so conceived and so dedicated, can long endure. We are met on a great _____^{Location} of that war. We have come to dedicate a portion of that _____^{location} as a final resting place for those who here gave their _____^{Plural noun} that that nation might live. It is altogether fitting and proper that we should do this.

_____^{Conjunction} in a larger sense, we can not _____^{Verb} -- we can not _____^{Verb} -- we can not _____^{Verb} -- this ground. The brave men, _____^{Verb ending in ing} and _____^{Adjective} who struggled here, have consecrated it, _____^{Preposition} our _____^{Adjective} power to add or detract. The world will little note, nor long _____^{Verb} what we say here, but it can never _____^{Verb} what they did here. It is for us the _____^{Verb ending in ing} rather, to be _____^{Past tense verb} here to the _____^{Past tense verb} work which they who fought here have thus far so nobly advanced. It is rather for us to be here dedicated to the great _____^{Noun} remaining before us -- that from these _____^{Adjective} dead we take increased devotion to that cause for which they gave the last Adjective measure of devotion -- that we here Adverb resolve that these dead shall not have died in vain -- that this nation, under Proper noun shall have a new Noun of freedom -- and that government of the Pronoun by the pronoun for the pronoun shall not Verb from the Noun.
